Application Package for the DBA Program (2023-2024)

Program Overview

Hitotsubashi ICS has offered since 2002 a doctoral degree program aimed at developing scholars who can serve as “one bridge” between the worlds of scholarship and practice. The Doctor of Business Administration (DBA) program is conducted in English at Hitotsubashi ICS’s campus in Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo.

The DBA program places particular emphasis on business problem-solving and its practical implications, while providing a theoretical and scientific foundation that adds academic rigor to research. DBA candidates combine insights from their own business experience with new knowledge gained through a rigorous program of independent research and exposure to state-of-the-art ideas discussed at business schools. DBA candidates are required to produce distinctive, original output at the leading edge of applied management research. Successful DBA theses combine original theories and methods as well as offer practical relevance and insights that will influence how managers think about business issues.

The DBA program relies heavily on individual initiative. Each DBA candidate spends a minimum of three years designing and executing a research project under the academic supervision of Hitotsubashi ICS faculty. This work results in a thesis targeting publication as an academic paper or a research-oriented management book. DBA candidates are required to complete three mandatory courses and seminar, and can choose from among a range of elective courses as many as which support implementation of their research. A candidate’s academic milestones in the program include a) successful defense of their thesis proposal at a hearing, and b) successful completion and defense of their doctoral thesis. DBA candidates are permitted to audit MBA courses with the approval of their advisor and the course instructor. During the program, there are opportunities to work as a research assistant (RA) or teaching assistant (TA) for their advisor or other faculty members.

Successful applicants to the DBA program must have two or more years of full-time work experience. While an MBA degree or other master’s degree is generally required for admission, the Admissions Committee may grant waivers for exceptionally qualified applicants.

The types of qualified applicants Hitotsubashi ICS seeks to attract to its DBA program include:

- (1) Professionals with a master’s degree seeking an early career change into academia as a faculty member of a business school. As standards for academic performance continue to rise among hiring business schools, more rigorous academic training is required for full-time faculty positions. Hitotsubashi ICS strongly recommends that candidates seeking a career in academia enroll in the program full time and contact the school one or two years prior to applying to the DBA program. This course of action improves the likelihood of a full-time doctoral student securing funds from their first year via external research fellowships such as the Research Fellowship for Young Scientists of the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (JSPS).

- (2) Faculty members and instructors at other business schools currently not holding a doctoral degree (e.g., Jitsumuka-kyoin at Japanese business schools) and seeking to develop their research, education and academic careers at a higher level as doctoral degree holders.
- (3) Experienced senior management practitioners who have already formulated clear research ideas through their own work experiences and are envisioning the DBA degree as an integrated part of their business careers.

DBA candidates must maintain residency in Japan while enrolled at Hitotsubashi ICS in order to participate in the program's courses and meetings with faculty members.

Professor Satoshi Akutsu is the DBA Program Director. Students may request any member of the DBA faculty to be their thesis advisor, contingent on obtaining approval from the DBA Program Committee and the faculty member concerned.
